Chest Quiz 102
Tough Starts

You may enter a fictitious name and e-mail address or your own name and e-mail address, if you wish. The name you choose will be shown in a "best scores" table. You would include your own e-mail address if you wanted the quiz and its results e-mailed to you. Answer the questions below by selecting the one best answer.

Before you do the quiz, why not Check out the latest Quiz Statistics and the Top Scores?

Name: (see above)
E-mail: (see above

1. The patient shown below is a premature newborn. The most likely diagnosis is:

a. Transient tachypnea of the newborn
b. Congenital lobar emphysema
c. Hyaline membrane disease
d. Cystic adenomatoid malformation
e. Meconium aspiration syndrome

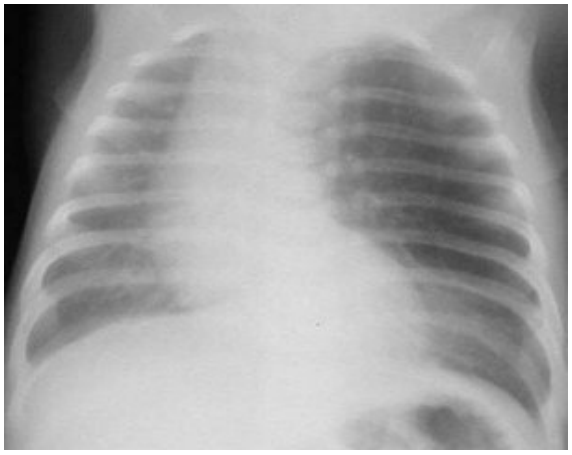
2. The patient is a 3 month old. What is the most likely diagnosis?

a. Transient tachypnea of the newborn
b. Congenital lobar emphysema
c. Hyaline membrane disease
d. Cystic adenomatoid malformation
e. Meconium aspiration syndrome

3. The patient is a post-mature newborn. What is the most likely diagnosis?

a. Transient tachypnea of the newborn
b. Congenital lobar emphysema
c. Hyaline membrane disease
d. Cystic adenomatoid malformation
e. Meconium aspiration syndrome

4. The patient shown below most likely has:



a. Transient tachypnea of the newborn
b. Congenital lobar emphysema
c. Hyaline membrane disease
d. Cystic adenomatoid malformation
e. Meconium aspiration syndrome

5. The patient is a premature infant with respiratory distress. A film done the next day is normal. What is the most likely diagnosis?

a. Transient tachypnea of the newborn
b. Congenital lobar emphysema
c. Hyaline membrane disease
d. Cystic adenomatoid malformation
e. Meconium aspiration syndrome

Score

Copyright © 2003 LearningRadiology.com