It's normal to feel stress and anxiety during a pandemic, particularly if you are trying to decide to rebook medical appointments. The American College of Radiology suggests imaging offices make a plan to keep you and their staff safe.

During COVID-19, your imaging practice may:

SCHEDULING
- Ask if you are feeling sick before scheduling your appointment
- Meet with you before your appointment online or via phone

WAITING ROOM
- Give you a mask
- Practice social distancing
- Not allow extra people

YOUR HEALTH CARE PROVIDERS
- Screen staff temperatures
- Wear protective gear for your care
- Disinfect surfaces between patients

Your risk of exposure during medical imaging is low. Your radiologist is always concerned about patient safety.
