Relational Leadership: Building High Quality Connections & Collaborations (Murphy)

High-quality connections are essential for effective leadership, and can be strengthened with mentoring, coaching, and everyday growth opportunities with colleagues. In today’s increasingly diverse workforce, the ability to nurture relationships and interpersonal collaboration requires empathy and relational skills more than ever. As a leader, your capacity to create and leverage a network of relationships is an important determinant of engagement and performance, your own and others.

• Understand the characteristics of high-quality connections
• Identify behaviors that foster trust, purpose, and energy
• Assess your developmental (mentoring) network
• Create an action plan for your own relational development